Ex Aedibus

Geo. Hooper, R. in Christo
Patri Gilb. Cant. Archiep. à sacris Domestticis.

AS Originally the 119 Psalm is divided into parts by kinds of Letters, and each Part into Verses, by Letters of the same sort beginning their first words : so here the LXVI Books of the Bible are counted by Three Orders of Twenty, and a Fourth Order of Six Letters beginning their Arguments ; Also the Contents of Chapters in longer Books, as of Psalms in theirs, are distinguished by the Measures and Terminations of Verses.

2. As the clauses over the columns in the Bible are commonly about four Syllables apiece, so here a Distick of twenty Syllables is commonly the contents of five Chapters : Also the Terminations of the two first Disticks from the beginning of a Book sound A, of the two next E, &c. distinguishing the Decads of Chapters in each Book, by Vowels sounding the Terminations of Tetrastickes including their Contents.

3. That some sense of Matter may combine, when the Tenour of words fails most, at the end of a Distick : And that Memories may better distinguish Verses of the same Distick ; the first Verse for each longer book is three clauses, whence each Distick, but for the end of a Book, ends with the former part ; and each following Distick which is not the Alphabetical beginning of a Book, begins with the latter part of a divided clause.

4. As the former part of each divided clause, sounding the Termination of the foregoing Distick, stands between the numbers of foregoing Chapters and Verses. So its latter part, between the numbers of its own Chapters and Verses is counted as its chief substance, making the former Verses in these Disticks of three clauses apiece. However, each divided clause taking up two lines of the Table, here are alwayes three lines to each verse but for the end of a Book.

5. According to any ones diligence in comparing the noted verse after each Clause with its context in the Bible, and in revolving these Verses with the reason of their Order : he may hope, through the blessing of God, to be able at any time to declare the chief subject of a Chapter or Psalm ; or bearing its passages, to recollect by their Clause, to what Chapter or Psalm they belong, sooner and more certainly than any shall find them by a Concordance.

1189	GENESIS	31102

Hence you may have the best directions for yearly readings of the Bible: 66. Books being 11. for each two months, as 1189 Chapters with Psalms are 11. less than 100. for each month or 31102. verses are 98. less then 600. for each week, or 85. for each perfect day and 77. for the odd time, which according to the new account is 5. hours 49. minutes and the fifth part of a minute.

2. Yet such proceedings are more easily stated in the punctual Accounts which is a table of 325. lines each line being divided by 100. spaces, and to the sixty six first spaces of the first line propose each book of the Bible by the first letter of its name or a point in the space for a following Book of the same name.

3. The next twelve lines propose a space for each Chapter or Psalm, noting the first Chapter of each book by the first letter of its name or a digit for the first chapter of a following book of the same name, the spaces for other Chapters or Psalms having only points or titles.

4. The last 312. lines propose a space for each verse of the Bible, noting the first verses of the first chapters of books by the letters of their names, and the first verses of following Chapters or Psalms by figures for the numbers of their order, the spaces for all other verses having only points or titles.

5. In this table sticking a pin on the space of the verse where you end reading, it will be easy to foresee the bounds of following lectures, the lines and Columns of the table being proposed by fives, tens, fifties, &c.

6. Also to recollect former readings, here being a space for each verse, your memory may be helped by staying thereon, to consider how well you remember its words or understand its matter. Or if on this occasion you enquire further by reading the text or consulting persons or books, what you gain now will probably be revived in your mind reviewing the table another time.

7. As the numbers of this table in hand are revolved by those punctual accounts, So there are two prompting tables the former mentioning such chapters and Psalms together as have the same numbers of verses with their contents here and the number of verses in foregoing and following Chapters or Psalms in their textuall order.

8. The latter prompting table proposeth the clauses or contents alphabetically with somewhat for following Chapters or Psalms between their names and numbers of verses, the verses in each being recounted from the beginnings of the pages and table, but the latter hath more lines, 1 Sam. 8, being repeated both at that and what, &c.

9. There is also an Abridgment of all these tables, or a threefold order of the Bibles Chapters in 12. columes, each colume but the last having 100 lines besides directions and recollections.

10. The middle of those colums notes the first Chapter of each book by the first letters of its name and its second chapter by the letter beginning its argument in this table, the other Chapters & Psalms being distinguished by numbers of their order, all having numbers of verses in the same lines, and a recollection under each ~~fifth~~ line from the beginning of the table.

11. On the 59. line of the second colume of this table before Deut. 6. there is B, noting that there are 158. clauses in the Alphabetically table beginning with A. and so answerably for other letters.

12. On the first line after G for Gen. 1. there is 2. noting that there is no chapter or Psalm of less then two verses On the second line after A. for Gen. 2. there is 3. noting that there is but one Psalm of less then two verses, &c.

13 There are also divers other tables both from the common and rolling Press, whereof elsewhere.

14. Here are some errata as Gen. 45. 38. read 28. Ex. 34. Tables Num. 18. priest: 1 Sam. 8. 1 what Jer. 5. fro Am. 4. Bashan Zech. 5. flying 9. colt Mat. power divine Rev. 11. and rise 11. 19.

12. the dragon 3. 17. and so it was composed, but the Printer, as he saies, intending better letters, mistook repeting two higher lines, &c.
